Kendall's Spavin Cure.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain it effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

From Rev. P. N. GRANGER,

Presiding Elder of the St. Albans District. ST. ALBANS, VT., Jan., 20, 1880.
DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—In reply to your letter I will say that my experience with Kendall's Spavin Cure has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it, cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks when he became better, but when I put him on the road he grew worse, when I discovered that a ring-bone was forming, I procured a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found. Respectfully yours, P. N. GRANGER.

Perseverance Will Tell.

STROUGHTON, MASS., March 16, 1880.
B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—In justice to you and myself, I think I ought to let you know that I have removed two bone spavins with Kendall's Spavin Cure, one very large one, don't know how long the spavin had been there. I have owned the horse eight months. It took me four months to take the large one off and two for the small one. I have used ten bottles. The horse is entirely well, not at all stiff, and no bunch to be seen or felt. This is a wonderful medicine. It is a new thing here, but if it does for all what it has done for me it will be very great.

Respectfully yours, CHAS. E. PARKER.
KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE is sure in its effects, mild in its action as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach a every deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargement, such as spavins, splints, curbs, callous, sprains, swellings, any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for illustrated Circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1. per bottle, or six bottles for $5. ALL DRUGGISTS have it or can get it for you or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO. Enosburgh Falls, Vermont. j27d.

IT WAS HIS WIFE.

An "Over True Tale"—How a Man Fell in Love the Second Time.

A noted music teacher of New York City relates the following incident from real life, which contains a moral worth recognition by wives:

Two years ago a card was brought into my music-room, bearing the name of a well-known and fashionable married lady. When she was ushered in I was surprised to see so young a looking woman, though, to be sure, she is not yet forty, and a fair complexion and clear blue eyes make her look younger. She seemed a little embarrassed, but asked me to try her voice. I did so, and found it uncultivated, but was singularly fresh and sweet; in quality a light soprano. I told her so, and her face flushed eagerly as she asked:

"Professor, could you teach me to sing?"

"Yes," I replied, "if you choose to apply yourself earnestly."

"I will, and if you can manage it so that I need not be seen, and that no one knows of it, I will take a lesson every day."

We made the best agreement we could, and the lady never failed to appear promptly at the hour. She was so anxious and so persevering that she made the most extraordinary progress, and, when spring came, her voice had so strengthened and developed as to be almost beyond recognition.

During the summer I heard nothing of her beyond mention in the society papers of her being at Saratoga. In the fall she called upon me, and, taking both my hands in hers, shook them earnestly, as she said: "Professor, I have come to thank you for making me the happiest woman alive." She then told me that her husband, to whom she was deeply attached, was passionately fond of vocal music, and had always regretted that she could not sing to him.

She had never cultivated her voice before marriage, and afterward the coming of children and the claims of society had prevented her attempting it; but the unlucky day came when Mr. R. made the acquaintance of a charming little widow with a charming voice, who was always ready and willing to sing sweet songs to him, and he gradually fell into the way of spending many of his evenings with her.

At heart devoted to his wife, he was unconscious of his gradual neglect of her, and would have been astonished had she resented his enjoyment of these musical tete-a-tetes. About the widow I am not prepared to speak. Mrs. R., like a nice woman, did not resent it, but undid the enemy, as you will see. Her music lessons she kept a profound secret from her family. In the summer they went, as usual, to Saratoga, and took possession of one of the pretty cottages at the United States Hotel.

The morning after their arrival the local newspaper contained a notice that the leading soprano of the Episcopal Church was ill with a throat affection, and the congregation was asked to make due allowance for the disabled choir. The next morning, Sunday, Mr. R., with two of the children, wended his way to the church of his belief, Mrs. R. having excused herself on the plea of a headache.

After the opening service, the minister announced that "a lady from New York had kindly volunteered to sing in place of the sick soprano, and in consequence the musical service would be the same as usual." A few moments later a clear, sweet voice rang through the church, touched the hearts of the people, perhaps, even more through the exquisite expression and feeling which the music had rendered than the qualities of the voice itself. Mr. R. was fascinated, delighted, and inwardly made comparisons between it and the wifely widow not flattering to the latter. After the services were over he eagerly sought the minister to ascertain the name of the charming soprano, whose face he had not been able to see from his seat.

"Come with me and I will introduce you," said the minister, who knew Mr. R. by reputation. They entered the choir together, and the good man began, "Miss Brown, permit me to introduce—" when he was interrupted by Mr. R. ejaculating, "Great heavens! it is my wife!" And, place and company, notwithstanding, he gave a hearty embrace in his delight and surprise. To cut the story short, he fell in love with her all over again, the singing siren was forgotten, and I don't believe you can find a happier couple in this great city. To mark the occasion, Mr. R. gave his wife a magnificent set of diamonds, which she wears with a great deal of pride. All of which is true.

Decidedly Tough Fowls.

I was much amused at many incredulous persons doubting the truth of the statement about duck-shooting published in the Richmond Dispatch, wherein a couple of hunters on the Chesapeake shot a small dipper duck, putting four loads of No. 4 shot into it, then ran it down with a boat, caught it, picked all the feathers from it, cut its head off and, after taking out its entrails, let it into the water to wash it, when it gave a flop and got away, swimming so rapidly that it took them an hour to secure it again.

Perhaps this does look a little fishy, but it can be readily believed by any one that is acquainted with the tough nature of Virginia fowls. In the fall of 1864 I was a member of the Thirty-fourth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and we were camping at Winchester, in the Shenandoah Valley. The whole country thereabout had been occupied by both Union and Confederate armies times innumerable, and all the chickens, geese, turkeys and pigs had long disappeared into the capacious stomachs and haversacks of the hungry soldiers, except one old rooster, whose long spurs and venerable appearance had saved him from the foragers' nimble fingers. He looked so tough that a soldier whose courage would never falter at charging an enemy's battery shrank from the more difficult task of boiling his carcass tender enough to eat. We were out of rations and hungry. My mess got sight of that old rooster, whose comb had been worn down by the storms of many years, and bore a slight impress of the initials B. C. We were driven to desperation by the cravings of our hungry stomachs, and in a few moments we had him dressed and in a camp-kettle, boiling furiously, with a large pile of fagots collected. We were to sit up all night, by turns, and keep the fire red-hot under him, hoping by this time to have him cooked for a dainty breakfast. My turn came to fire under him at four o'clock a. m. I kept him boiling for over an hour, when sleep overcame me, and I dropped off into a doze. Just at break of day, imagine my surprise at being aroused by a cry always sweet to the ears of an old soldier. That rooster had jumped up, knocked the lid off the kettle, and was sitting on the rim crowing for daylight, as if nothing had happened to mar his comfort or pleasure. After arousing the camp with his clarion bugle notes, he flew down and strutted off with the importance of a field officer of the day, and my mess had no breakfast. I merely make this statement to corroborate the duck-shooter's yarn. Captains Hawkins was with me on that occasion, and can vouch for me, if any doubt that Virginia fowls are tough.—J. H. S., Locust Corner, Ohio.

THE Cincinnati Times-Star of Saturday says:

Charles Wormald, of Berry avenue, a young man about twenty years of age, is suffering from smallpox, supposed to have been contracted in Dayton. Charlie was working at the carpenter business near where Charles Sawyer died in Dayton, both before and after Sawyer's death. He was taken sick Tuesday with what was supposed to be a fever, but yesterday it developed into a case of smallpox. Everybody in town heard of it by noon and to say it caused excitement but mildly expresses it. People were standing around on the corners discussing how it should be suppressed. This is the first case that has appeared in Bellevue. The neighborhood of Berry avenue and Center street, which is usually alive with children during the evening, was wholly deserted last evening. Mrs. Wormald will attend to her son during the sickness.

The young man referred to above is a son of Mr. George Wormald, formerly of this city.

What the Princess Said.

Not that we of the great and glorious care a nickel about royalty or the nabobs of Europe or any other corner of this habitable globe, still, there is a sweet pleasantness lingering around the factlike a halo of glory, that our American boys—no matter where or in what position they may be placed—can and do make their mark. The Big U. S. Circus which has just finished a tour of Canada, while in Montreal was honored with a visit by the Princess Louise, and we give her opinion of our show folks:

"That which most astonishes me is the pluck the vim and the perseverance exhibited by the people of the United States. We see it everywhere and particularly in our amusements. For instance, Myers & Shorb's Big United States Circus, Museum and Menagerie arrived in Ottawa from the West, the morning the Marquis and I arrived from Quebec. I was struck with the machine-like precision with which the men labored in removing from their trains of cars the cages and vans of their vast Circus and Menagerie. On our way to Redan Hall, and as we drove past the military parade grounds, I saw other men engaged in putting up the immense pavilions used for their exhibitions. Immediately after lunch, we drove to the great show, where we found after a few hours preparations that the establishment was open for visitors with everything, including the fine zoological collection, nicely arranged for our one hour's inspection. At 2 o'clock sharp, we ventured in to the grand circus where the riding and athletic performances would soon take place. Here again I saw more evidence of the Yankee feeling and push. Even the horses as they rushed around the arena seemed to say: "we are Yankee horses." The athletes running down an inclined plane to a spring-board which threw them over many elephants, camels and horses chased each other with true Yankee instinct as if each one could or should pass the other. I must acknowledge I was delighted with the great show. Delighted because I saw men who could push and drive men with energy and ambition—something we lack in our own country. The prosperity and thrift of the United States can be easily accounted for after witnessing these energetic Yankee showmen."

Myers & Shorb's Big United States Circus, Museum and Menagerie will exhibit in Maysville on Saturday, August 5th, giving everybody an opportunity of witnessing that which so greatly pleased Queen Victoria's youngest daughter, in Canada, only a few days ago.

At the reunion of the First Kentucky Brigade, at the Blue Licks, on the 19th inst. Mr. Charles Herbst of Macon, Ga., a member of the Second Regiment of Infantry, exhibited a collection of Confederate souvenirs that attracted general attention. It was a book containing the autographs of many of the Southern Generals and other prominent persons of the Confederacy. It contained also pieces of the battle flags of as many as forty different regiments. Among them are those of all the Kentucky Infantry regiments, those of Forts Sumpter and Moultrie, and the Confederate cruiser Alabama. The collection also embraces all the issue of Confederate stamps, bonds, money, etc. The collection is probably the rarest of the kind in the country.

FROCKS FOR LITTLE GIRLS.

Intended for Lassies of From Three to Eight Years of Age.

The Season.

Four frocks for girls of from three to eight years of age are described as follows: The first is a frock with a casqua of flowered material, which has a particularly pretty effect over the skirt of self colored stuff. The latter is made in princess shape and closed diagonally in front, being caught up high on one side and finished with a large bow of ribbon. The wide turn down collar and revers of the half-long sleeves are of white embroidery. The second is a frock with plaits in front of brown cretonne, trimmed with checked material of the same texture and closed at the side. The back and front pieces are laid in three deep box plaits and the square neck opening bordered with plaited frill above, which is of a bias stripe of checked material, the short sleeves being made to correspond; a plaited flounce simulates a skirt.

Next is a frock with Russian blouse. This pretty frock, of small patterned zephyr, is cut in princess shape, the blouse of plain stuff, made on a firm foundation, being very full and caught in the middle, so as to give the bunchy appearance of a Russian blouse. The close is made at the side with hooks and eyes. A broad kilt is set under the polonaise as a false skirt. Stripes of white embroidery for the tiny sleeves, headed by the revers at the neck, which are straight behind and run out in a point on each side in front. Last is a frock with sash trimming. The long paletot bodies is made with a plaited basque added behind and trimmed with a few rows of military braid. The skirt is ornamented with several narrow gathered flounces, the lower one being wider than the others. A broad sash caught up with a tab of the stuff on one side and tasteful bows finish this dress.

COUNTY POINTS.

WASHINGTON.

The steam whistle is heard in all directions, a number of threshers are in the immediate vicinity. The acreage of grain is large. The yield is fine. The face of the farmer weaveth a cheerful look.

Some of our enterprising farmers are talking of having a rock crushing machine soon. The loose rock in the way of the plow will be pulverized and used as a fertilizer. The productive powers of an already magnificent soil will thus be enhanced.

We learn that a concert under the management of Mrs. Anna Barnes will be given soon. The object to which the proceeds are to be applied is a worthy one. An organ is to be purchased for the M. E. Church South. The character of the entertainment and the purpose for which it will be held, ought to call out a full house.

Mr. J. B. Bently, formerly of this place, now connected with the commission on Mississippi river improvements is on a visit to his father-in-law, Col. Charles A. Marshall. Mr. B. made many warm friends whilst here and they always give him a warm welcome back.

Col. J. N. Current passed here en route to Germantown the other day. We learn that he is solicited to take the Academy there. In his school here he gave entire satisfaction and we parted from him reluctantly.

A colored boy near town had his leg broken by the falling of a gate. Dr. Hunter with the assistance of Owens promptly set the broken member.

The Spartan Law-Giver, Lycurgus.

The history and legislation of Lycurgus are involved in considerable obscurity; indeed, to such an extent that many of the leading scholars of modern times have viewed them with no little suspicion. The generally accepted account of the celebrated Spartan law-giver is to the effect that Lycurgus lived about 880 years before our era, or, according to others, about the year 1100 B. C., and was descended from the Doric family of the Proclidae. Polydectes, his brother, King of Sparta, died, and to his widow was born a posthumous son. The widow and mother proposed to Lycurgus to destroy the unborn babe if he married her. Lycurgus was shocked, but pretended partially to consent by saying it was as easy to make way with an infant after as before it came into the world. When the child was born Lycurgus at once proclaimed him King, and his uncle became his guardian. Then it is recorded that Lycurgus traveled in many lands in Asia Minor, Crete, Egypt, and even India, but as to the latter it is decidedly uncertain and unlikely. He studied the constitutions of the nations he traveled among, and finally, after many long journeyings, he returned to Sparta. During his absence affairs had become disordered in Sparta, and on his arrival almost the entire community requested him to draw up a constitution for them, to which he consented. Then he induced them to solemnly swear that they would make no change in the laws till he came back, and he left Sparta, and it was never known exactly whether he went or where he died. By his departure and failure to return he had hoped to make the Spartan Constitution eternal; and the people saw he was a god, and worshipped him. Probably such a person as Lycurgus existed, who, at some remote time and critical juncture in Spartan affairs, may have been selected, perhaps, on account of his wisdom and reputation, to prepare a code of laws for the better government of the State. It can not be imagined that the entire legislation of Sparta was first invented by Lycurgus and imposed upon the people all at once; it is reasonable to suppose, however, that he collected, modified, and enlarged the previously existing institutions of Sparta. It is related by Plutarch that Lycurgus "commanded that all gold and silver coin should be called in, and that only a sort of money made of iron should be current, a great weight and quantity of which was of but very little worth; so that to lay up twenty or thirty pounds there was required a pretty large closet, and, to remove it, nothing less than a yoke of oxen. With the diffusion of this money, at once a number of vices were banished from Lacedaemon; for who would rob another of such a coin? Who would unjustly detain or take by force, or accept as a bribe, a thing which is not easy to hide nor a credit to have, nor, indeed, of any use to cut in pieces? For when it was just red hot, they quenched it in vinegar, and by that means spoiled it, and made it almost incapable of being worked.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

A Silver Lamp Three Hundred Years Old.

While engaged in improving the ground around the old Catholic church in Ysleta some parties dug out of the ground a large silver lamp. Investigation and research proved that it had been brought over to this country from Spain about 1543 by Cordovan, the well-known prospector and settler. The lamp is of the very finest silver and very heavy and valuable. It was sent to Santa Fe, New Mexico, where it was cleaned and burnished and returned to the church, an object of curiosity as well as a valuable relic and ornament. This church was constructed in the year 1630, under the auspices of the Franciscan friars.—El Paso Times.

THERE are a variety of little circumstances in life which, like pins in a lady's dress, are necessary for keeping it together, and giving it neatness and elegance.—Beecher. Ah, ha! So the old man has noticed 'em too. However, the above was written before the invention of the blessed safety pins, we have no doubt.—Peck's Sun.
